The study of Chinese contributes to the overall education of learners, particularly in the areas of communication, intercultural understanding and general knowledge

Through studying Chinese, learners gain access to Chinese-speaking communities in China and across the world, including Australia. The ability to communicate in Chinese will (in conjunction with other skills acquired in the study of this course) provide learners with enhanced vocational opportunities and the possibility to apply Chinese culture and language skills to work, further study, training or personal interests. This course builds on Chinese - Foundation and provides a pathway to the study of Chinese at university level. This course teaches Modern Standard Chinese, also known as Mandarin, Putonghua and Guoyu.

Course Description

Learners will use Chinese to communicate with others by:

- listening and responding to spoken Chinese
- communicating in spoken Chinese
- reading and responding to written Chinese
- expressing ideas and information in written Chinese.

This is done within a contextual framework of three prescribed themes:

1. The individual
2. Chinese-speaking communities
3. The changing world.

These themes, and their topics and sub-topics, have been selected to enable learners to develop their understanding of how language and culture are inter-related.

The themes have a number of topics and sub-topics. The placement of the topics under themes is intended to provide a particular perspective for each of the topics. The sub-topics expand on the topics and guide the learner and teacher as to how the topics may be treated.

It is not expected that all themes and topics will require the same amount of study time. The length of time and depth devoted to each topic will vary according to the linguistic needs and interests of the learner.

The learner will negotiate at least one topic drawn from the themes and their topics/sub-topics for more detailed study.

Rationale

The study of Chinese contributes to the overall education of learners, particularly in the areas of communication, cross-cultural understanding, and general knowledge. It provides access to the culture of China and Chinese-speaking communities. The study promotes understanding of different attitudes and values within the wider Australian community and beyond.

The language to be studied and assessed is the modern standard or official version of Chinese.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this course, learners will be able to:

1. use Chinese to commicate with others by listening and responding to spoken Chinese
2. use Chinese to communicate with others by communicating in spoken Chinese
3. use Chinese to communicate with others by reading and responding to written Chinese
4. use Chinese to communicate with others by expressing ideas and information in written Chinese
5. gain a detailed understanding and appreciation of Chinese customs and traditions, and the cultural context in which Chinese is used
6. critically reflect on their own culture through the study of Chinese culture
7. have a detailed understanding of Chinese as a language system
8. make connections between English and another language
9. apply negotiation, planning and organisational skills.

Access

This Level 3 course is designed for learners who have successfully completed Chinese – Foundation Level 2, or its equivalent.

Pathways

Chinese – Foundation Level 2 provides a pathway to this course.

This course provides a pathway to the study of Chinese at tertiary level, and to various vocational education and training (VET) packages that include language components/ units of competency.

Course Size And Complexity

This course has a complexity level of 3.

At Level 3, the learner is expected to acquire a combination of theoretical and/or technical and factual knowledge and skills and use judgement when varying procedures to deal with unusual or unexpected aspects that may arise. Some skills in organising self and others are expected. Level 3 is a standard suitable to prepare learners for further study at tertiary level. VET competencies at this level are often those characteristic of an AQF Certificate III.

This course has a size value of 15.

Course Content

THEMES

1. The Individual

The theme 'The Individual' enables the learner to explore aspects of his or her own life, for example, sense of self, personal values, opinions, ideas and relationships with others. At the same time, this theme also enables the learner to study topics from the perspective of others.

Personal World	Education	Daily Life
Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • personal identity (name, age, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, age, sex, marital status, nationality, origin, family character) • relationships (family, friends, occupations of parents) • house and home (type of accommodation, rooms, furniture, own room, services, amenities, region, common plants and animals) • personal health and welfare • personal opinions.	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • school • personal aspirations/future career • courses/subjects • examinations.	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • life at home • daily routine • hobbies and interests/sport • shopping and money facilities, foodstuffs, clothes and fashion, household articles, medicine, prices, weights and measures • food and drink • travel to and from places • holidays • invitations and appointments • services (postal, telephone, bank, police, hospital, garage, repairs, petrol station) • weather • emails, SMS.

2. Chinese-Speaking Communities

The theme 'Chinese-speaking Communities' explores topics from the perspective of Chinese-speaking communities and encourages the learner to reflect on his or her own and other cultures.

TOPICS
Past and Present	People and Places	Arts and Entertainment
Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • social customs/traditions and their historical origin • important historical events and their commemoration (e.g. by national holidays or festivals, monuments, naming of features such as buildings or roads) • historical links with Australia • some important personalities in Chinese contemporary society and/or history • changes in social structures and attitudes (e.g. the family, women's issues, religion).	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • city and country life • Chinese influences on Australian culture and society (e.g. food and drink, fashions) • shopping • getting around (transport and directions) • significant geographical and climatic features of China.	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • media • cinema • music and songs • literature • sport • theatre and performing arts • computer games • art • architecture.

3. The Changing World

The theme 'The Changing World' enables the learner to explore change as it affects aspects of the world such as work, technology, trade and tourism and social issues.

Social Issues	Travel and Tourism	The World of Work
Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • immigration/migration • relationships with neighbouring / regional nations • health • the young and the elderly • the environment.	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • tourist attractions in China • visiting China • entering and leaving China, travel document (passport, visa, tickets) • hotels, hostels, camping grounds • hosting Chinese visitors • home stay.	Sub-topics studied may include, but are not limited to: • the effect of technological developments • types of jobs, professions, trades • men and women in the workforce • Australia and China as trading partners • attitudes to work.

USE OF ENGLISH

While it is expected that learners will study a range of oral and written texts in Chinese, it may be appropriate in some circumstances to select texts using English. Equally, it may be appropriate for a learner to respond to a text in English on some occasions.

Note: at its meeting on 3 April 2013, TASC decided that from 2014 the examination specifications for all Level 3 language courses would include use of the target language in responses in the reading section of the written examination.

TEXT TYPES

The learner will be expected to be familiar with a variety of text types. Text types indicated with an asterisk (*) are those that the learner may be expected to produce in the external examination of this Level 3 course. Teachers may introduce the learner to a wider range of text types in the course of their teaching and learning program:

advertisement	invitation	presentation
announcement	letter*	profile*
article	list	poem
brochure	map	recipe
chart	menu	report
conversation/interview*	narrative*	review
diary/journal entry*	news item	song
discussion	note/message	speech/talk
editorial	novel/short story	survey
email*	on-line texts	table
film	play
form (fill in)	postcard

VOCABULARY

While there is no nationally prescribed vocabulary list, it is expected that learners will be familiar with a range of vocabulary and idioms relevant to the themes described in the course.

DICTIONARIES

Teachers will assist learners to develop the necessary skills and confidence to use dictionaries effectively.

For details regarding the use of dictionaries in the external assessment process see 'What can I take to my exam?'.

GRAMMAR AND STRUCTURES

Grammar can be referred to as the organisation of, and relationship between, all the elements that constitute a language as it functions.

There are many different theories of grammar, and a number of different approaches towards its teaching and learning. The categories used below are not intended to promote any particular theory of grammar, or to favour one methodology over another.

In this Level 3 course it is assumed that the learner will already have acquired a significant understanding of the function of grammar in Chinese through prior knowledge or study of Chinese.

Developing the learner's ability to convey meaning effectively in a range of contexts will, however, necessarily involve extending awareness of the system of structures underlying the language, as well as the ability both to apply and adapt this knowledge.

The following grammatical structures are those that the learner is expected to recognise and use.

A: PARTS OF SPEECH

Work Requirements

From their study of these themes and related topics/sub-topics learners will undertake at least one substantial assessment task (approximately 1000 words or equivalent). The mode of presentation is not prescribed. It may be a written report, an oral report or presentation, or a multimodal* presentation. The task will be assessed internally, and will be a significant source of evidence for the assessment of the Learning Outcomes, 'gain a detailed understanding and appreciation of Chinese customs and traditions, and the cultural context in which Chinese is used' and 'critically reflect on their own culture through the study of Chinese culture' (criterion 5) and criterion 6.

While the report/presentation of the assessment task may be in English, Chinese should be used as appropriate (for example, when discussing Chinese concepts, using direct quotations from sources in Chinese, or referring to Chinese terms).

Learners will negotiate the task with their teacher. While not prescribed, the nature of the task will be one that engages the learner in critical reflection and that provides opportunities to present reasoned arguments/points of view and analysis. An issue-based approach is more appropriate than one that is purely descriptive in nature. For example, an activity or topic might be framed as a question such as:

- 'In what ways, and to what extent, has Chinese culture influenced Australian culture?'
- 'Compare and contrast
  - the lyrics and music of a popular Chinese song with the lyrics and music of a popular Australian song.
  or
  - the front page of a Chinese newspaper with the front page of an Australian newspaper.
  or
  - a popular Chinese television show with a popular Australian television show.
  What do these similarities and differences tell us about the two cultures?'

- 'In what ways, and to what extent, have Chinese-speaking communities in Australia contributed to our multicultural society?'

- 'Compare and contrast the role of sport/art/performing arts in Chinese and Australian society. How might the similarities and differences be explained?'

- 'Compare and contrast contemporary daily life in Chinese and Australian society. How might the similarities and differences be explained?'

Multimodal: a combination of two or more communication modes (for example print, image, and spoken text, as in a film or computer presentation).*

Assessment

Criterion-based assessment is a form of outcomes assessment that identifies the extent of learner achievement at an appropriate end-point of study. Although assessment – as part of the learning program – is continuous, much of it is formative, and is done to help learners identify what they need to do to attain the maximum benefit from their study of the course. Therefore, assessment for summative reporting to TASC will focus on what both teacher and learner understand to reflect end-point achievement.

The standard of achievement each learner attains on each criterion is recorded as a rating 'A', 'B', or 'C', according to the outcomes specified in the standards section of the course.

A 't' notation must be used where a learner demonstrates any achievement against a criterion less than the standard specified for the 'C' rating.

A 'z' notation is to be used where a learner provides no evidence of achievement at all.

Providers offering this course must participate in quality assurance processes specified by TASC to ensure provider validity and comparability of standards across all awards. To learn more, see TASC's quality assurance processes and assessment information.

Internal assessment of all criteria will be made by the provider. Providers will report the learner's rating for each criterion to TASC.

TASC will supervise the external assessment of designated criteria which will be indicated by an asterisk (*). The ratings obtained from the external assessments will be used in addition to internal ratings from the provider to determine the final award.

Quality Assurance Process

The following processes will be facilitated by TASC to ensure there is:

- a match between the standards for achievement specified in the course and the skills and knowledge demonstrated by learners
- community confidence in the integrity and meaning of the qualification.

Process – TASC gives course providers feedback about any systematic differences in the relationship of their internal and external assessments and, where appropriate, seeks further evidence through audit and requires corrective action in the future.

External Assessment Requirements

The external assessment requirements for the course Chinese Level 3 consists of:

- an oral examination; and
- a written examination.

The criteria to be externally assessed are 1, 2, 3, & 4.

For details regarding the use of dictionaries in the external assessment process see 'What can I take to my exam?'.

Note: at its meeting on 3 April 2013, TASC decided that from 2014 the examination specifications for all Level 3 language courses would include use of the target language in responses in the reading section of the written examination.

For further information see the TASC's External Assessment Guidelines for this course which can be found in the Supporting Documents below.

Criteria

The assessment for Chinese Level 3 will be based on the degree to which the learner can:

1. listen and respond to spoken Chinese*
2. communicate in spoken Chinese*
3. read and respond to written Chinese texts*
4. express ideas and information in written Chinese*
5. demonstrate understanding of Chinese culture
6. apply negotiation, planning and organisational skills

* = denotes criteria that are both internally and externally assessed.

Standards

Criterion 1: listen and respond to spoken Chinese

This criterion is both internally and externally assessed.

Based on the grammar and structures in this Level 3 course content, the learner listens to spoken Chinese and responds.*

Rating A	Rating B	Rating C
In spoken conversations the learner listens to speech paced in a normal, conversational manner. Occasionally repetition and/or rephrasing may be requested from the speaker for clarification.	In spoken conversations the learner generally listens to speech paced in an authentic, conversational manner but requires slower pace when complex language structures are used and/or unfamiliar concepts/ideas are discussed. Repetition and/or rephrasing may be requested from the speaker for clarification.	In spoken conversations the learner requires moderated delivery and repetition and/or rephrasing.
The learner's response reflects understanding of all main points / general aspects and points of detail, additional information and/or specifics given in the spoken text.	The learner's response reflects understanding of all main points / general aspects and some points of detail, additional information and/or specifics given in the spoken text.	The learner's response reflects understanding of most main points / general aspects of the spoken text. Points of detail, additional information and/or specifics may not be addressed.

* 'Responses' may include, but are not limited to: carrying out an action or task; forming a spoken response; or forming a written response.

 Illustrative example:

> Given oral text: "Sue loves to go into the city to shop. She seeks out the latest fashions, and is especially interested in accessory trends. In the city there is a much larger range than in her hometown. Being in the city also gives Sue a change to meet up with some of her old school friends."
> Question: 'Explain why Sue goes to the city.'
> Response: "Because she likes to shop there and meets her friends." (= C rating: details/additional information about what she buys, why she buys them in the city and the inference that her old school friends do not live in her hometown are not included in the response).

Criterion 2: communicate in spoken Chinese

This criterion is both internally and externally assessed.

Rating 'A':
Based on the grammar and structures in the Level 3 course content, the learner engages in conversation in familiar and unfamiliar contexts. The learner's oral communication in Chinese is characterised by:

Rating 'B':
Based on the grammar and structures in the Level 3 course content, the learner engages in conversation in familiar and unfamiliar contexts. The learner's oral communication in Chinese is characterised by:

Rating 'C':

a high degree of fluency and accuracy. Listeners clearly understand what is said.	a degree of fluency and accuracy. While there are some errors and/or imperfect control of some patterns, listeners understand what is said.	a limited degree of fluency and accuracy. While there are errors, listeners generally understand what is said.

* As defined by this course's content.

Criterion 3: read and respond to written Chinese texts

This criterion is both internally and externally assessed.

Based on the grammar and structures in the Level 3 course content, the learner reads Chinese texts and responds.*

Rating A	Rating B	Rating C
The learner makes some use of external references during aspects of the reading process.	The learner makes frequent use of external references during the reading process.	The learner is dependent on use of external references during the reading process.
The learner's response reflects understanding of all main points / general aspects and points of detail, additional information and/or specifics given in the written text.	The learner's response reflects understanding of all main points / general aspects and some points of detail, additional information and/or specifics given in the written text.	The learner's response reflects understanding of most main points / general aspects of the written text. Points of detail, additional information and/or specifics may not be addressed.

* 'Responses' may include, but are not limited to: carrying out an action or task; forming a spoken response; or forming a written response.

 'External references' may include, but are not limited to: the use of dictionaries; and the prompts of others.

 Illustrative example:

> Given written text: "Sue loves to go into the city to shop. She seeks out the latest fashions, and is especially interested in accessory trends. In the city there is a much larger range than in her hometown. Being in the city also gives Sue a change to meet up with some of her old school friends."

Course Evaluation

The Department of Education's Curriculum Services will develop and regularly revise the curriculum. This evaluation will be informed by the experience of the course's implementation, delivery and assessment.

In addition, stakeholders may request Curriculum Services to review a particular aspect of an accredited course.

Requests for amendments to an accredited course will be forwarded by Curriculum Services to the Office of TASC for formal consideration.

Such requests for amendment will be considered in terms of the likely improvements to the outcomes for learners, possible consequences for delivery and assessment of the course, and alignment with Australian Curriculum materials.

A course is formally analysed prior to the expiry of its accreditation as part of the process to develop specifications to guide the development of any replacement course.

Expectations Defined By National Standards

This course document includes materials consistent with the Collaborative Curriculum and Assessment Framework for Languages (CCAFL).

Accreditation

The accreditation period for this course has been renewed from 1 January 2021 until 31 December 2023.

During the accreditation period required amendments can be considered via established processes.

Should outcomes of the Years 9-12 Review process find this course unsuitable for inclusion in the Tasmanian senior secondary curriculum, its accreditation may be cancelled. Any such cancellation would not occur during an academic year.
